Valedictorian Speech

When I first started writing this speech, I had no ideas at all. So, like any clueless person, I Googled “Valedictorian speeches” and found lots of them. I can’t say for sure that this speech will be 100% original, but I can assure you, I will be 100% honest. I am Teo Kelly from Northland Primary School.

The “Paradise” we children have known as Primary school will now change into a “Warzone” we call Secondary school.

Of course, I could have never gotten a chance to even give this speech without the support of Northland Teachers, KO teachers, especially Mr Ong, my parents and friends.

All of us have heard of the Giving Tree, the selfless tree that would give a young boy anything he wanted, everything he requested.

Eventually, she was nothing but a severed stump.

Like the Giving Tree, we too have been given gifts that we sometimes overlook and take for granted: Education, Experience or a good family. We alone decide how our talents are bestowed upon the world. As you embark on the next journey of your life, never forget to be thankful of the gifts you possess.

Always remember every new beginning comes from some other beginning’s end.

Thank you and congratulations to the prize winners.
